FOOD SHORTAGE THREATENS RUHR GERMANY REPORTS

Occupaton Authorities Say They Will Not Interfere With Food Shipments—Coal Blocked Absolutely Complete

APPEAL OF GERMAN LABOR TO U. S. CALLED OFFICIAL

By Associated Press

While the grip of the Franco-Belgian industrial control of the Ruhr is being felt in unoccupied Germany to which coal shipments are completely cut off, the pinch of hunger is beginning to threaten in Ruhr itself, according to German authorities. Food supplies are low in many towns and consumation of goverument food is in progress in Berlin. Authorities of occupation indicated their intention not to interfere with food shipments but the Germans contend the congestion of rolling stock at the frontiers is causing such interference While there is nothing definite to show the railroad strike is settled throughout the Ruhr, strkers appear to have gone back to work to a large extent in the Cologne area and many interior Ruhr railroads.

The appeal of German labor to the American Congress was made public last night to "save Europe and the world from inevitable disaster," is declared in Berlin to have been made in entire independence of German official circles.

FORTY SIGN DECISION CARDS AT BIG POOLROOM SERVICE

Forty men of the 147 present signed decision cards at the service conducted by Rev. Trigg Thomas at the Hub pool room this morning The subject of the evangelist's sermon this morning was "The rich young Jew who won by losing."

This "rich young Jew" was none other than Saul of Tarsus who, while on his way to Damascus, was stricken down by the power of the Lord. The Jew spent the remainder of his life in the service of the Lord.

"He was a man of mighty intellect; he had wealth, social position, everything that can make a man great," said Rev. Thomas, "he could have been the ruler of the world had he so desired. But he chose to endure the hardships and persecutions in the cause of Christ."

Tomorrow morning the pool room services will come to a close. Rev. Thomas will speak on "The Essentials of a Christian Life." In his sermon he will mention the principle things that characterize the life of the Christian and that of the sinner.

GROUNDHOG FAILS TO SEE SHADOW, WILL STAY OUT

The groundhog is out, and he's going to stay out. He failed to see his shadow today.

That means no more cold weather this winter.

The groundhog knows, take it from him. Every Feb. 2 he's been venturing forth to test the weather. Unable to see his shadow for the clouds that hung over Middlesboro today, he knew it meant warm weather hereafter and he's decided to stay out.

But if he had seen his shadow, he would have turned right back into his dugout. For he knows, even though the sun is shining, we'd be due for six weeks more of wintry blasts. You can't fool Mr Groundhog.

The idea of Groundhog Day seems to be of German origin. In Germany, however, it was the badger that foretold the weather Feb. 2.

When the first Germans coming to America brought this belief with them, the common groundhog or woodchuck was adopted in place of the badger, because the latter was not so well known here.

But the belief that the weather on Feb. 2 predicts warm or cold weather for six weeks to come dates back to the fifth century, when the festival of Candlemas was established.

This festival is still being celebrated in the Anglican, Roman and Green churches, Other names for the festival are "The Purification of the Blessed Virgin," "Christ's Presentation at the Temple," "The Holiday of St. Simon," and, in some parts of England, "The Wives' Feast."

On this day church candles are blessed.

SPEAK ON CHRIST'S SECOND COMING

Trigg Thomas Tells Last Night of Excuses Men Make Not to Come in Church

The large crowds hearing Trigg Thomas, nightly at the First Presbyterian Church, will never forget the man and his stirring messages. He has been here nearly three weeks; has spoken several times a day, at court houses ,pool rooms and in private houses. He has preached every night at the church to crowded houses and twice on Sunday three times His services end Sunday night, after a morning service and an afternoon service for men only at three o'clock

Last night in spite of the falling rain the church was filled, and the preacher spoke of "The Man Who Got Married' and Other Excuses." It was a great sermon, filled with a gospel message, as it unfolded one by one the characters in the drama; the invitation to the feast and the refusal of them one by one to accept.

"Listen!" said the preacher in a whisper as he cupped hands over mouth and while the breathless audience listened, "it was their last chance and thy didn't know it They had accepted, then refused, and now the host determined he would even cut their friendship and close his door to them forevermore.

"These men didn't mean what they said when they gave their excuses Just look at them; one man said he had bought a field and must go prove it. Did you ever know of a sane, sensible man, going to prove a field at night? Did you ever know of a man in his seven senses to buy a field without looking into the title deed? Wouldn't that field be there in the morning just the same? Why did he make this excuse? He just didn't want to go; he didn't intend to accept. Of course he thought he might trample on this man's friendship and get another bid, but he never did.

Then look at the other excuse. He had bought the yoke of oxen and he must try them out. Did you ever plow with oxen? I have This man excused himself on the ground that he wanted to go and test them out, five yoke of oxen; ten strange oxen, at night. Ever hear of anything so absurd as that? why, he was just making an excuse.

"Then the man who married a wife. Let me tell you something. If ever there was a time when a couple need God and the church and Christ, it is when they first get married. Let them drift away from church and Christ for even a few weeks, and the chances are they will not come back for a long time if at all'

To those who believe in the second coming of Jesus Christ, there will be a treat tonight, when Dr. Trigg Thomas, evanglist preaching at the First Presbyterian church, will preach on that great theme. Dr. Thomas is a Bible preacher, and has a marvelous way of opening up the scriptures, and making the Book answer all his questions. He will have something new to say tonight on that great subject, and the public is invited to be present. 7:30 o'clock.

FOR FRUIT GROWING IN EAST KENTUCKY

Speaker Says Mountain District Is Ideal Place For Apples And Other Fruits.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 1.—There are hundreds and perhaps thousands of acres in every county in Eastern Kentucky that will produce apples equal in size and color and superior in flavor to those produced in the famous apple growing sections of Washington and Oregon, Fred C. Van Hoose, Mingo, today declared in discussing the possibilities of fruit growing in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky at the eleventh annual Farm and Home Convention being held at the College of Agriculture.

There is a vast region in Eastern Kentucky capable of producing millions of bushels of apples that has never been discovered, the speaker added.

The same intelligence and industry applied to an orchard on an Eastern Kentucky hillside as that applied to an orchard in the Hood River or Yakima Valley will produce very much the same results as are obtained in the famous apple grawing regions, and it addition, the Eastern Kentucky grower would have more than a dollar a bushel advantage in transportation and marketing costs over his competitor, the speaker continued.

"Some day in the near future, a few wide-awake, up-to-date fruit growers are going to discover the wonderful possibilities for apple growing in Eastern Kentucky and step in and reap a golden harvest, he said.

Fruit growers in Eastern Kentucky have the soil, climate and market all at their door and only need intelligent pruning, spraying and cultivation to make orcharding profitable, Mr. Van Hoose said.

EDUCATION LEADING PROBLEM FACING AMERICA TODAY

Speaker At Farm Convention Wants Attention Directed Toward Development Of Rural Schools.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL IS BEST PLAN FOR COUNTRY

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 2.—Education stands at the head of the many tremendously important problems facing America today, in the opinion of Lee L. Driver, Harrisburg, Pa., and director of rural education in that state who addressed Kentucky farmers and their wives at the eleventh annual Farm and Home Convention at the College of Agriculture here today on the subject of, "Rural Education."

It is necessary to have an educated people, in view of the fact that a democracy depends upon the attitude of its people toward government law and order, he pointed out. Rural education typical of its environment, is necessary, since any democracy depends primarily upon its agriculture, he explained.

"It is a lamentable fact that the rural school has lagged behind any other rural institution," Mr. Driver declared. "The farmer does not hesitate to buy the latest and most improved farm machinery because of the better and quicker work which he is able to do with it. He does not hesitate to invest in better livestock because of influence on his progress. He does not hesitate to equip his home to the best of his ability. But in some way, all these improvements come before the rural school."

One of the great problems now is to arouse interest in the fact that the rural school be coordinated with all these other institutions, the speaker said.

"The ideal rural school must be a factor in developing the social, political and economic institutions of the rural community. It must go in the home through music, art, literature and a developed desire for things better. It must go into the church through music, higher ideals for truth and right living.

It must go into the political life through a greater respect for authority and obedience to law. It must go into the economic life by teaching values, not only of production, but also of disposing of that production and in purchasing.

The rural school must develop a greater producing power, the speaker pointed out, and added that at least two farmers of tomorrow must do the work being done by three today.

The school that is to do these things must have a curriculum that will teach manual arts, agriculture, home economics and household arts, the speaker said.

The consolidated school furnishes opportunity for instruction of this kind, the speaker pointed out.

"In the consolidated school, children are brought together in sufficient numbers that interest is maintained and opportunity economically offered in the way of improved equipment. This school functions as the real nerve center of the community. It gives an opportunity for broader acquaintances and enriches social and religious life. It teaches a greater respect for government and authority by grouping children in sufficient numbers to actually give the necessity for this authority. It breaks down the prejudices of the little community by merging it into the broader vision of the larger community."

All this is accomplished at less cost than is the case where the lesser opportunity is offered, value received considered, Mr. Driver declared. The interest of the child is best considered when the interest of the child is considered, he declared.

CITY GETS FINE IF CASE STARTS IN POLICE COURT

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 2.—Cities are entitled to "the funds in every case in which the prosecution originates in the Police Court and judgment is there rendered in favor of the city against defendant, from which the latter appeals to the Circuit Court, where a similar penalty is imposed," the Court of Appeals ruled in an opinion by Chief Justice Sampson, reversing the Mason Circuit Court in the case of the city of Maysville against James Keys, County Clerk William Edgars was fined $300 and sentenced to jail in the Maysville Police Court for violating the prohibition law. He appealed to the Circuit Court, where a jury fined him $300 and sentenced him to jail. The city claimed the $300 fine and $15 costs, and the court said that the city is entitled to them.

ALLEGED FORGER CONFESSES HE HAD CONFEDERATE HERE

Davidson, the alleged forger held here by the police, has confessed to having a confederate named Thornhill who assisted him in the work of passing spurious checks here, at Cumberland Gap and elsewhere. His partner who was with him here in Middlesboro escaped arrest when Davidson was captured and it is thought that he left this part of the country.

The two men left a trail of worthless checks in their wake. Various cases of persons victimized have been reported since Davidson was captured. Dr. W. O. Pollard seems to be the latest victim. He was at the city hall this morning with a check for seven dollars signed by the prisoner. It had been passed on to him by endorsement.

QUESTIONNAIRE IS SENT COUNTIES BY EFFICIENCY BOARD

Ask For Information on Financial Situation to Determine More Efficient Government

MANY COUNTIES HAVE SAME ORGANIZATION FOR 100 YEARS

By Associated Press.

FRANKFORT, Feb. 2.—In an effort to determine a way for the administration of county governments of Kentucky costing taxpayers fifteen millions annually, the Efficiency Commission today mailed out questionnaires to all county judges asking for information. The letter inquires into the taxing system, handling county revenues, investment sinking funds, road building methods, number and duties of county officers and assistants. E. S. Griffinhagen, director of organization, discussing the subject today said many counties were conducting affairs on lines laid down when Kentucky was first organized and that "many things are done because they have been done more than a hundred years and for no other apparent reasons."

LAST YEAR BIGGEST YET IN AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

The annual statistics on motor vehicles compiled by The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., give a total of 12,231,445 cars and trucks registered in this country in 1922. A gain of 1,757,050 or 16.7 per cent is registered over 1921 which gave a total of 10,524,895.

1922 was the biggest year the automotive industry has known. Every state in the union shows an increase in the number of cars opepratetd, as opposed to the preceding year. From the standpoint of production, manufacturers enjoyed the biggest year since the inception of the motor car, with 2,576,219 cars and trucks produced. There can be no doubt that the motor vehicle is essential to the social and industrial welfare of the country. Today there is one car for every 8.6 people in the country.. In the past two years more cars have been produced than were registered in 1916. This enormous growth is unaralleled in any industry.

POSTAL ACTIVITIES SHOW PROSPERITY

Good Business Through Local Post Ofice Indicates Good Business in Section

Postal receipts for the moth just ending exceeded those of January last year by $637.20, according to Chas. E. Cooke, postmaster. December, 1921, was exceeded by $286. Incoming mail is also increasing in volume the postmaster stated.

"This indicates general prosperity for the city," Mr. Cooke said, "for the postoffice is one of the best business barometers that we have."

The 120 additional letter boxes that were installed at the postoffice last November have all been rented and a waiting list has already been started. Those living on routes in the residental section receive their mail once each day while those in the business section have two deliveries. It is suggested by the postmaster that those living where good delivery service is possible should be satisfied to receive their mail at home so that others not so conveniently situated may have the postoffice boxes.

"The installing of mail boxes at homes has been made compulsory," said Mr. Cooke, "and those who do not obey the order will not receive their mail at their residence but can get it here at the general delivery window. They have been notified to that effect. There is no excuse for not having a box. One of the local laws not only giving the boxes to apply, but also does the work putting them up."

A THOUGHT

For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part; but then I shall know even as also I am known.—1 Cor. 13:12.

The wise man is but a clever infant, spelling letters from a hieroglyphical prophetic book, the lexicon of which lies in eternity.—Carlyle.

BELL COUNTY TO CLEAR INDEBTEDNESS

The action of the fiscal court of Bell County this week which assures the placing of the county on a cash basis is a forward step. No business can be operated with sure success without a budget, and the court is now applying this principle to the affairs of the country. The planning of a budget based upon careful estimates of expenses in past years gives the court information which it must have in order to determine the amount of taxes to levy.

The indebtedness of $60,000 is not in itself serious enough to be alarming to the people of the county but if no business-like action is taken to liquidate the indebtedness and to bring the county warrants back to par, disastrous results will follow. The people must face the issue and meet this indebtedness as planned by the fiscal court, and the plan of floating a loan through the banks to be reimbursed by the special levy of taxes is decidedly a wise one.

The people have a right, however to a vigorous and efficient administration of the county affairs by county officers. Saving no doubt can be made in some instances in the budget, but in other cases the officers may have to go beyond the amounts set in order to do their full duty, in some instances, we cannot afford to economize, especially in regard to our care of the poor, and in vigorous law enforcement.

Our county officers must show their resolve to stand by the budget and to give efficient service in every respect. Any variation from the budget should be scrutinized carefully before an order is written for the payment of the obligation. Let us have a good administration, and the people will not object to paying the bills.

PRESERVATION OF NATIONAL FORESTS

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has outlined a plan for the preservation of our national forests through a "comprehensive forest policy" which would aim to halt the extravagant waste of timber that has characterized the industry in this country since its inception. The secretary described the situation as "urgent," and intimates in a no less forceful way serious consequences should America continue to neglect this great natural resource.

Secretary Wallace advocates immediate legislation for each of the following five provisions:

1 Extension of federal co-operation with the states for the protection of forests in the state or private ownership. The annual loss of about $20,000,000 from forests fires can be reduced by such co-operation and the use of federal funds for protecting the forests is justified to the same degree as the use of city funds for the maintenance of a fire fighting department is justified.

2 Complete co-operation with the states in growing and distributing forest-planting material. New forests should be established where they are most needed and the soil is adapted to that purpose.

3. Purchase of timber land should be extended as rapidly as the condition of the public treasury will permit. Such lands purchased are an investment, increase in value, and become a continuing source of national income.

4 All lands in the unreserved public domain and in Indian reservations which will ultimately be thrown open for other dispositions, and suitable for timber growth, should be included in the national forests.

5 Provision should be made for research in growing and utilization of timber on a scale adequate to present needs. While we are advancing rapidly in acquiring technical information our present research agencies cannot meet the demands of the existing situation as to timber use or new timber growth.

America is consuming timber four times as fast as it is grown. Equal in importance to the growing of forests the secretary points out, is the best possible utilization of the wood, for any supply, no matter of what proportions, eventually will disappear if waste is continued.

Secretary Wallace has outlined a very comprehensive plan, and legislative action in accordance with it would be a wise step on the part of the lawmakers.—Winchester Sun.

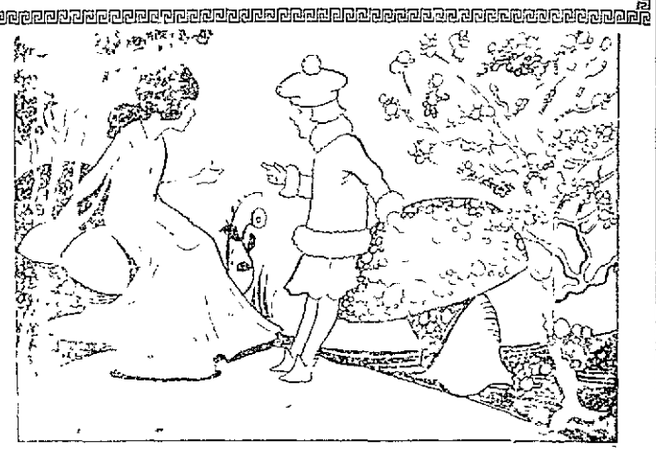
Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton



"Will you please make me a valentine to send to Mr. Peekabout, the Man-in-the-Moon?" asked Nancy.

"Certainly!" said Forget-Me-Not, the fairy. "What shall it be about?"

Nancy thought a minute. "Just about nice things," she decided.

"He's so old and kind and always thinking of other people. He lives alone on the moon in a golden forest in a funny little hut with the rickety-est furniture. And he wears old clothes and his hair is pure white, what there is of it for he's mostly bald-headed."

Ten Nancy told the fairy all about the time she and Nick had been to the moon and what they saw there.

After that Forget-Me-Not wrote and wrote and wrote. And this valentine she finally handed to the little girl, and when the twins flew off to the moon and tucked under Mr. Peekabouts front door.

"My sweetheart's the Man-in-the-moon,
I'm going to visit him soon,
Up there in the sky
Where the starlets go by,
And little light clouds like big birdies fly by.
I'll sail in a misty balloon.

We'll walk in the forest of gold,
Mr. Moon Man and I, in the cold,
And wherever we go
We'll keep watching, you know,
To see that the earth goes quite smoothly below
Where for thousands of years it has rolled.

"Mr. Peekabout's nice and so kind!
People think that he's going quite blind!"
But his eyes are so sharp,
He can see in the dark,
And his ears! My, oh my! They hear every remark.

And he has a most wonderful mind!
"Yes, my sweetheart's the Man-in-the-Moon.
He keeps watch from July unto June
Sees every small head,
Tucked quite safely in bed
Then turns on the Moon like a lamp overhead.
Till the sky is as bright as at noon
"From Guess Who!"

When Mr. Peekabout found it, he read it and chuckled.

"I'll bet you it's from Nancy," he said fondly.

REFUSING THE HURDLE

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

MONOGAMY

By Berton Braley

However much man may philander
With women from Maine to Peru,
However unstable and fickle
He seems to the casual view,
You find in despite of his falseness,
The heart in his masculine breast
Holds dearest one woman,
One fondly loved woman,
For he would give all the rest!

Yes, whether he's fickle or faithful,
And whether he's craven or brave,
A Galahad Launcelot or Arthur,
A knight or a thief or a knave;
There's one face means more than all others.
One image alone and apart.
There's always one woman,
One dearly loved woman,
Who reigns in his innermost heart.

She may be a queen or a wanton,
A creature of ice or of flame,
The mate of his home and his fireside,
The light-o'-love sharing his shame;
But hers is the name he shall murmer,
When into the depths he is hurled,
There's always one woman.
For whom he would give all the world!
One dearly loved woman,

Too many who catch on to things quickly let go the same way.

A boy seldom swears before his dad because his dad swears first.

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agues Abeling.

KATE WARD, widow of
DAN WARD, has a visitor,
CHINATOWN ALICE, who says Dan was father of her child,
DOROTHY, Kate is much perturbed A few evenings later she and her father,
JUSTIN PARSONS, find near their home an unconscious victim of an auto crash,
JAMES LATHAM, and minister to him. Recovering, he woos Kate Because of Dan, though fond of Latham, she is uncertain what to say. It develops that Latham knew Dan. He takes her to a fishing shack the latter owned and they find a trunk which, however, contains no papers throwing any light on Dan's past. Determined to learn if the trunk means anything to Alice, Kate asks the latter to visit her.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

An early mail, a few days later brought Kate a scrawly note. She opened it eagerly. It was the answer to her own.

"I am answering your letter right away," she wrote, "because I think it is so kind of you to ask Dorothy and me to visit you."

They were to arrive, Kate read, Saturday morning and could remain until Sunday evening. Alice ran on about the treat such a visit would be for Dorothy. The letter impressed Kate as genuinely happy. Whatever her own shortcomings. Kate decided, Alice was a good mother. She had been deceptive about Dorothy's illness, but undoubtedly the thing had not hurt Dorothy and Kate believed that there must be some real reason other than a desire for money for herself back of the deception.

When the finishing touch had been put on the room Alice and Dorothy were to occupy during their visit, Kate looked about the place. Everything was in perfect order, even the little trunk was there, just where it should be to catch the eye of anyone entering.

Kate looked at the trunk. She wondered if Alice would betray anything when she entered the room and saw it. Would she recognize it? Had it ever meant anything to her?

Kate Ward's hand trembled slightly as she adjusted the frilly dimity curtains at the window of her guest chamber. Then she went down stairs and attempted to still the fluttering within her by talking to Justin and the dog, Monk, until train time neared.

"Am I foolish, father," she asked of Justin, "to want to clear up something concerning one who is already gone? One of whom I can ask no apology and expect no retribution, no matter what I must find is the truth?"

Justin Parsons smiled.

"You wouldn't be human, my dear, if you did not try to understand the unexplained.

"But," he continued, "regardless of what you at length find is true, you would ask no apology, not even if he were living. Don't you know little girl, that love never asks an apology?

"And," Justin spoke slowly, "it ought not ask an explanation—Kate."

The words came to Kate with the force of a blow. Her father had, in the last analysis, criticized her. He felt she wasn't doing the fair thing in trying to prove something she should not have been impelled to prove.

She brushed the thought aside. She knew she never could be quite at peace until she was sure she had been the one woman in Dan's life after their marriage, or that she had not been. And what if she found that she had not? What then? After all, she never had thought of that as a possibility. Is it better to be in doubt about a loved one than to know an unpleasant truth, she wondered.

Kate looked at her watch. It was nearly train time.

THE MAN SHE MARRIED

"The man that I wed," said she,
A tall and handsome man must be,
I'll let him smoke ,but not too much,
But drink he must decline
He must be generous with his purse,
When angered he must never curse,
On Sundays he must go to church
In weather foul or fine."

"The man that I wed," said she,
"Must think the world and all of me,
He must be gracious in his speech
And have a ready smile
But more than that he must be true,
And wise and strong enough to do,
Not just the common work of life,
But something that's worth while."

The maiden meant it when she said
These things about the man she'd wed,
But cupid laughs at lofty dreams
And madly fires his darts
For well he knows that maids forget
Such vows when once the man is met,
And marriages are never made
By order blanks and charts.

She's married now, but not unto
A tall and handsome hero who
Possesses all the manly traits
She swore she'd have to see;
Her husband's slovenly and short,
He has no snappy clothes to sport,
He's just a common man who dips
His bread crusts in his tea

He has been known to have a grouch,
He falls asleep upon the couch,
He sometimes lets lets his whiskers grow,
He's careless as can be;
There's naught about the man she wed
To turn a lovely lady's head,
Yet I am glad she changed her mind
Because she married me!

A hurried, indistinct introduction almost always causes embarrassment. Names should be pronounced distinctly.

For the persons introduced, naturalness is the right form.

Brevity and clearness in the introduction and a note of sincerity on the part of those presented to one another gives by far the best effect

FRESH PRODUCTS NOW ON MARKET

Tomatoes, Strawberries and Cauliflower Make Appearance From South.

Tomatoes, strawberries and cauliflower are among the fresh vegetables now to be found on the local markets. Of course the rarity of these products which have been grown in southern climes and shipped here add to their price but it may also be argued that it adds to their flavor and general edibility.

To those whom the taste of strawberry pie has left a lingering memory, it be said that the price of this fruit is fifty-five cents per quart. Tomatoes are twenty-five to thirty cents per pound and they are not guaranteed by the grocer as to freshness and freedom from bruises.

Prices of other food products especially desirable desirable at this time of year are: Cauliflower, thirty-five to fifty cents; beets, ten cents to two for a quarter; turnips, twenty cents per gallon; celery, ten cents per bunch and upwards; radishes, five to seven cents per bunch, spinach, twenty-five cents per gallon; oyster plants, ten cents to two for twenty-five each.

A pleasing variety of onions, apples, head and leaf lettuce, green pepper, green beans and many other vegetables can be found on any well-stocked local market. Meats, oysters and fresh fish may also be obtained. Oysters are now selling at forty-five cents per pint while fish are going at from fifteen to thirty cents per pound.

the general tendency of the public appetite seems to be changing from the canned foods, dried beans, potatoes and meats to the fresh vegetables that are appearing in increasing varieties on the markets. Local grocers report large sales in the latest and most expensive vegetables.

American Women Most Beautiful

SIGRID ONEGIN

AMERICAN women are the most beautiful and the most beautifully gowned of any in the world, thinks Sigrid Onegin, the Swedish singer who has appeared in all the European capitals before making her debut this season.

"If ever I should be reincarnated," she says, "I want to be an American—a smart, chic New Yorker."

It's a mistaken notion, Miss Onegin adds, "that musical taste in the United States has not yet the development it has reached in the old world.

"Fundamentally," she maintains "Americans have sound musical appreciation. They are diverted easily and like anything that amuses them temporarily, but instinctively and inevitably they come back to that which really is good."
